INTRODUCTORY STATEMENT

This list of agricultural organizations includes 1,096 active town, county and state societies, which have been established for the purpose of advancing one or more phases of agriculture in the state of New York. The names and addresses of the principal officers are given; also the date of organization, number of members and time of meeting, when known. The information is as complete and accurate as the department was able to secure from the officers of the societies and is for the year 1911.

At the head of the list stand the state organizations, the two largest of which are the Patrons of Industry, with more than 20,000 members, and the State Grange, with a membership of nearly 100,000, which includes the members of all subordinate granges. The other thirty-nine organizations are interested chiefly in agricultural affairs throughout the entire state or a part of the state exceeding a county.

The organizations concerned in the agricultural interests of counties and smaller districts follow the list of state organizations and are arranged alphabetically by counties.

An average of one organization to each one hundred and ninety-three farms in the state is shown. The societies may be classified as follows: One State Grange; 48 county, or Pomona, granges; 766 subordinate granges; 1 State Patrons of Industry; 35 subordinate Patrons of Industry; 94 county and town fair associations; 23 farmers' clubs; 9 cooperative associations; 24 associations for poultry; 11 for fruit; 15 for dairying; 11 for stock breeders; 8 for bee-keepers; 7 for plant breeding and crops; 10 governmental, educational and experimental organizations; 13 cow testing associations; 13 horticultural and agricultural societies; 4 driving clubs; 1 drainage club; 1 hop-growers' club; and 1 housekeepers' conference (see table, pages 908, 909).

The members of these organizations form an army of earnest men and women who are giving time and thought to the betterment of agricultural conditions. The value of this united endeavor to promote every phase of agriculture can scarcely be estimated. One of the characteristics of the majority of these societies is their fraternal spirit, which insures a welcome to those similarly interested who come from other sections of the country and is a pledge of helpfulness to the stranger making creditable efforts to establish himself in farming.

In most cases the name of the organization shows the purpose for which it was created. Among the specific objects of the Grange, or Patrons of Husbandry, are the enhancement of the comforts of homes in the country, the strengthening of attachments to agricultural pursuits, the diversification of crops, cooperation and the fostering of mutual understanding, protection and advancement. The Patrons of Industry seek to establish mutual fire insurance, to encourage cooperative buying and selling and to promote sociability, education and fraternity.

Doubtless a few organizations which should have been included are omitted because not known. It is hoped that they will be brought to the attention of the department, as it is desired to have a record of every organization in the state which has to do with practical agriculture. Also correction of any error discovered on these pages is invited.

A list of butter and cheese factories, milk stations and condensing plants operated in New York during the season of 1910 constitutes the latter part of this bulletin. Such a list, accompanied by statistics, heretofore has been issued by the department as a separate publication.

The information contained in this bulletin has been collected and arranged under the direction of R. R. Riddell, in charge of the Bureau of Farm Lands and Statistics.

R. A. PEARSON,
Commissioner of Agriculture.
